

CAPS Director Nicole Conklin honored with excellence award

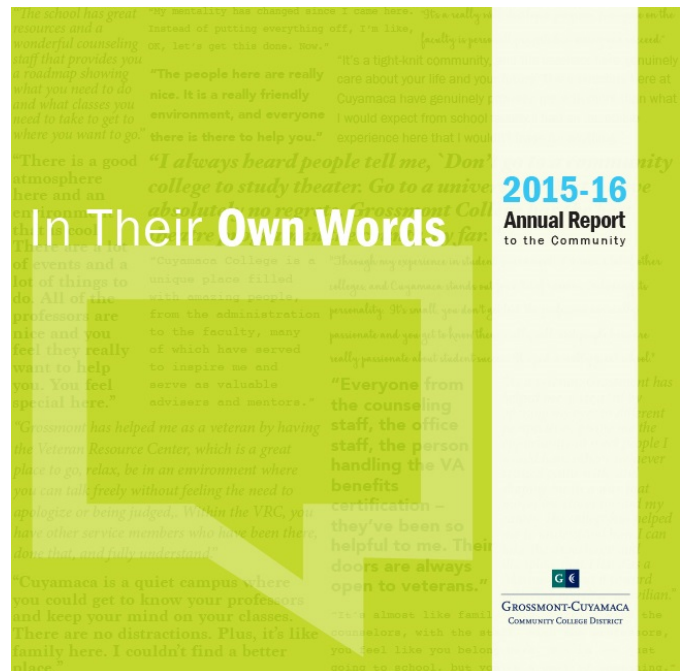

CAPS Director Nicole Conklin was one of five GCCCD employees to receive the John and Suanne Roueche Excellence Award at the League for Innovation in the Community College conference held in San Francisco. Other district employees who received the award were Grossmont College art history professor Marion de Koning, Grossmont College Administration of Justice instructor Shaun Donelson, Cuyamaca College English instructor Lauren Halsted, and Cuyamaca College math instructor Terrie Nichols. Vice Chancellor for Business Services Sue Rearic also attended the conference, held to share ideas and best practices among an international consortium of community colleges.

Another award for District's 2016-17 Annual Report

The District's 2016-17 annual report, In Their Own Words, received a silver award from the Council for Advancement and Support of Education. GCCCD was the only community college to receive an award in any category in the western region, which includes five states and two Pacific territories.

The annual report will also be receiving an award from the National Council for Marketing and Public Relations on March 27.

Fun Friday

Mardi Gras was the theme for the District Services quarterly potluck luncheon held on Feb. 24. Cajun food and lots of beads contributed to the festive occasion.

Yvette Macy and Kasi Althaus get into the Mardi Gras spirit.
