

Meet the Building Marshals

As part of the effort to support department & building level emergency planning, GCCCD Public Safety oversees the campus Building Marshal Program. In coordination with department deans, chairs and managers, Building Marshals are recruited to assist with evacuation in the event of an emergency. Teresa Greenhalgh - H Building

I am involved in the Emergency Preparedness and Response world outside of the College. I am a volunteer CERT Program Manager and a Certified Instructor for CERT. So volunteering to become a marshal was a natural step for me to take. My favorite part of being a Marshal is that I am part of a FUN group that makes up an active team, which is always on the ready to step up and help others during an incident.

I am currently with the HSI STEM Grant Team at Cuyamaca College. I have worked at Cuyamaca since the fall of 2010, although I have moved around to various positions and Departments. The first emergency supplies I bring to every office and of course my home are: a first aid kit, flashlight and lantern, extra water, and snacks. I do remember to rotate the supplies out, so that I always have a fresh supply on hand. The non-latex exam gloves only have a 1-year shelf life, so it is important to replace them for sure!

Ron Adams - Building 86

I became a building marshal to help make Grossmont College a safer place to educate our students and to provide a safe work environment. My favorite part of being a marshal is being able to tell Chancellor Miles and Vice Chancellor Rearic to vacate their offices (it's not often someone gets to tell them what to do).

I am the Warehouse Supervisor for both Grossmont and Cuyamaca College. I have been employed by the district for more than 20 years. The first emergency supply that I bought for my home was flashlights and I have them put all over the house, in the RV, and all of my vehicles.
