To help you explore your options, many career preparation programs offered by community colleges in two years or less lead to employment that:
- provides economic security and personal satisfaction
- provides improvement opportunities for advancement
- is in line with the latest developments
- provides use of the most modern technologies and equipment
- offers opportunities to use interpersonal skills, abilities and creativity
- opens doors to further education both on and off the employer-supported programs.

High school graduates may qualify for any of the career programs even if the usual college preparatory courses have not been taken.
